Who shall be subject to the New Regulation?

The Takeaway Establishments' Regulation targets all establishments involved in the preparation, transformation, cooking and sale of food and beverages that are meant to be consumed outside of the establishment, with the exception of (i) temporary establishments or stands that sell food items, (ii) stands in public markets, kiosks, esplanades and snack bars operated or managed by IAM and (iii) other establishments in the food sector that are subject to licensing or authorization under other laws.

Starting from 15 November 2021, new takeaway establishments will have to comply with the registration procedures before commencing operations. The establishments that have registered with the Macau Financial Services Bureau and declared, for tax purposes, commencement of operations until 15 of November 2021, are allowed a transitional period of six months, i.e., until 15 May 2022, to complete the registration procedures.

What is necessary to register the takeaway business in Macau?

Operational requirements

The Takeaway Establishments' Regulation sets several operational requirements that takeaway establishments need to comply with:

- 1) The establishment is required to be installed in a building with a physical ambience which is clearly incompatible with the takeaway business.
- 2) The establishments must comply with hygiene and food safety conditions and recommendations, and are required to maintain the following equipment and facilities under proper functioning:
 - Ventilation and lighting equipment;
 - Defense equipment against insect and rodent infestation;
 - Garbage collection equipment;
 - Usage of water from the public water supply;
 - Dishwasher;
 - Sewage system with drainage and siphons;

 - Display cabinets with anti-contamination storage, whenever food is to be exposed at room temperature;
 - Independent areas to separate different food preparation stages, when raw products are prepared (e.g. sushi, sashimi or marine products), and in case other activities besides takeaway are carried out at the establishment.

Application Documents

The applicant is required to submit an application form to the IAM (foodsafety.gov.mo)¹, together with the following documents:

- copy of the M/1 Industrial Contribution tax form for initial business registration/amendments issued by the Macau Financial Services Bureau;
- copy of the identification document (in case the applicant is an individual);
- business registration certificate, issued within 3 months by the Macau Commercial Register Office (in case the applicant is a business company); and

The registration certificate must be displayed in a visible location of the establishment and/or online in the event the business is advertised online. What are the main impacts for the SMEs and takeaway establishments?

The demand for food delivery services has increased significantly during the past years. The current coronavirus pandemic (COVID-19) context has accelerated the expansion of food delivery platforms, facilitating meals to the population without having to go to crowded restaurants and providing an important source of revenue for business owners in an economy ravaged by COVID 19.

However, considering the increase in the number of this type of establishments in Macau, regulating their activity is inevitable to ensure they operate under appropriate conditions. Registering these establishments is therefore a necessary step to enforce the regulation and to improve the safety and hygiene standards of this segment of the food and beverages industry and will have a positive effect on competition. The ultimate beneficiaries are consumers who will have access to clearer information about these establishments and be able to rely on higher quality standards imposed by the new regulation.
